SO, HOW WAS YOUR SUMMER?

By Patti DeLano

The Snowbirds are beginning to come back to Florida. "How was your summer?" they ask. "Was it hot?" Was it hot? We try to play it down. How hot was it? My tropical plants have asked to be sent home to the tropics where it's cooler. The dog days of August crept in and my Yorkie asked for a transfer back to his native England. "It was a wee bit hot," we say. How hot was it? It is so hot that my garden could only be weeded at 6 a.m. before sunrise. It was hot. I have many friends from Michigan where there are only two seasons--winter, and the fourth of July. Garrison Keeler says that in Minnesota you know summer has come when the folks get down to two layers of clothes. In England summer is described as two nice days and a thunderstorm. If the Garden of Eden had been in Florida, the devil would never have tempted Eve--he would have stayed below, where it is cooler. Here it was hot. Florida is hot. Imagine how the early settlers must have felt their first year in Florida. February: paradise: sunshine, cool breezes, water, beaches. Then August--it must have given them pause that the wagon train was a one-way ticket. To add to our grief, alligators and bugs prefer our climate--bugologists will tell you that insects shut down at 48 degrees, but Yankees start mentioning the heat when it's barely 80 degrees and we are still enjoying mild June breezes. Even the Santa Anna winds that blow hot, dry, desert air over Los Angeles would be a treat during the clammy, dank, muggy, smeltery, sultry, humid, hot summer days of Florida. And now I sit, sealed in my air-conditioned house, venturing out in my air-conditioned car to the air-conditioned Publix for some air-conditioned shopping. But wait! I was born in Kansas City before air conditioning! I fondly remember the adventure of sleeping outdoors on the front porch on the chance of a breeze. I was a city girl. On steamy August days we played in the street in the water of the fire hydrant courtesy of the smiling firemen who roamed the city--blocking the street--turning on the water for 15 minutes of splashing. I remember "air-cooled" movies with a block of ice and a fan blowing cooled air over us while we watched the newsreel, cartoon, and Roy Rogers movie. I think I just admitted to being over 55, but I wouldn't trade those memories for watching Sesame Street in air-conditioned comfort or make do with memories of Barbie dolls in the family room and TV at night, rather than the enjoying the cool evenings playing outside on the sidewalk until the streetlights came on, our signal to come home. And the sounds of the katydids announcing evening as the temperature dropped with the sun. Daytime there was the ice man. He would chip off a chunk and give one to each of us as a treat when his truck passed. And the song of the ice cream man's truck--the jingling bells on its wheels could be heard blocks away--I clutched a sweaty nickel, waiting for that hard, cold Fudgsicle packed in dry ice. Summers were fun even though the polio threat closed the city swimming pools. We slept on the porch swing in the shade of the doomed Elm trees and other city trees, like the "cigar" trees (Catalpas), that grew along the brick streets and showered them with tiny orchids in the spring and cooling shade in the summer. Why do I live here? Don't ask me in October when Isaias is visiting nearby. Wait for January when I will wax poetic about the beauty surrounding us. Today, I don't want to talk about it. It is just too hot.

I appreciate all the support and everyone who took their time to vote for us.

I am proud to have consistently offered service that is recognized by you and honored to receive so many awards over the years that our wall of awards has expanded onto another wall. Thank you for entrusting me with your hearing, I am glad I earned your respect.

POT NOT-SO-LUCKY

By S.H. Bown

I have a confession to make. I hate Pot Luck's. I know, I know - blasphemy! Please don't hate me, I'm just another park resident trying to survive. In my defense I've lived in our community for 22 years and have done my share of participating in these events. I loved the social aspect; seeing my friends and neighbors and having a chance to catch up with people I care about. It's the stress and performance anxiety I have a problem with. My husband, like all males in our community, has only one reaction to potlucks: "A pot luck ? Great I can eat all I want without being bugged since all the other guys will be doing it, too." This is followed by the inevitable question, as he turns to me with hope in his eyes, "What are you going to make?" And so, I become responsible for his lofty expectations. The pressure and stress begin. I wasn't always like this. In the beginning I was enthusiastic. I was one of those women who had a "special recipe" or "desert" that proved to be a successful offering. And then it happened. I became obsessive. I decided to have 4 "special recipes" and 4 "special desserts" that I could rotate. I purchased special unbreakable dinnerware with palm trees on them and napkins to match for our sojourns to the club house. I acquired a cooler with a seashell motif and an assortment of potluck worthy beverages that included wine. Oh, the joy! I was flying high.

Eventually, as with all highs, my body got used to it and try as I might I could not achieve that same initial euphoria again. I slipped into what I call phase two of the potluck mentality. I'd think, "Maybe I have something in the freezer that I can defrost?" It didn't take long for me to digress into phase three. "Maybe I've got some leftovers in the fridge that probably won't kill anyone? I'm sure I can use them to make some sort of casserole." Some of you may be familiar with phase four: "Another potluck? Let's just order a pizza." Until I finally fell out and hit phase five, I became one of those people who would ask, "Do we really have to go?" I was older, I'd aged, and I felt I could no longer be all things to all people. These days I'm grateful when I have enough energy to play Bridge or visit the Pottery Studio. But phase five is where I draw the line! I refuse to devolve into that sixth level of pot luck hell! You all know what I'm talking about. Attending the meal without contributing any food and hoping nobody will notice. But alas, this is never to be. There is always that one new enthusiastic member of our community who places her gourmet offering on the table, turns to you and asks, "Which dish is yours?" Of course I could make some excuse. "I didn't know about this until an hour ago." The response to this excuse is always, "Oh that's all right, no one cares." Followed by that look of doubt and destain that comes to her face as she turns away to share that not so subtle disapproval with the other women who've overheard our conversation. I for one will not live with this kind of shame! It is far more than my soul can bare. Instead, I will just remain in my home and find whatever is in the back of my fridge for our dinner.
